THE EXHIBITION OF TEXTILE MACHINERY AND TEXTILE AND ALLIED PRODUCTS

recently held at the Mechanics' Building, Boston, Massachusetts, goes on record as the largest and most comprehensive of the kind ever held in this country.

This was the seventh exposition held under management of the Textile Exhibitors' Association. Every foot of available space was taken; visitors crowded the halls on each day of the show and the large proportion of mill men was noteworthy. Many from the distant southern states were present; on Friday and Saturday a large number of overseers and others from the mills took the opportunity to examine the machines and to look up acquaintances.

The success of this exhibition demonstrates the fact that Boston is the best location for such an event in the north; and the lapse of three years since the show in New York and five years since the one in Boston undoubtedly brought out a larger attendance than would have been the case with shorter intervals between the exhibitions.

The meetings of the National Association of cotton manufacturers held at the Copley-Plaza Hotel on Wednesday and Thursday of the same week, added to the general interest and helped swell the attendance at the Mechanics' Building.

Our company exhibited eight Northrop Looms, one spooler, and one twister, all driven electrically. Also warpers, loom temples, spindles, rings, bobbin holders, spooler guides, etc.

Our illustrations were taken during the hour before visitors were admitted in the morning.
